Most features are present in Elements and PhotoShop but some features are either not present or require additional paid features for the absolute best quality. For pro photographers, Adobe Photoshop Plus, Elements or Pixelmator are the proper alternatives to Photoshop. Below are the basics of editing images using Photoshop and Photoshop Elements. RELATED POSTS: Basics of working with Adobe Photoshop Elements. Basics of working with Adobe Photoshop. How to Save Files Before opening a file, save the file as a new file. If you want to modify an existing file, remember to Save You must save before making changes. Photoshop Elements uses the FOLDER/FOLDER;LANGUAGE setting to determine the language for files. Auto Save The Auto Save feature saves your work every time you edit a file. To cancel an Auto Save, or to keep the last Auto Save, follow these steps: The Auto Save feature stores your work in the file so that when you exit the program you can continue editing. Before exiting the program, check the What Do You Want to Do menu. If "Ask if I Save," then Photoshop Elements asks you if you want to save the file in the directory where it currently exists or in a new location (creates a new file). For example, if you're editing an image on a desktop, you can choose to save the file on the desktop or save it in the folder on your PC or in the folder of your laptop. The backup is identical to the last backup. The backup is stored in the same location as the original file. The original and backup files are always stored in the same folder. To modify an Auto Save setting, perform the following steps: Go to the Edit menu and choose Preferences. Click the File Handling section of the Preferences dialog box. Edit the settings. Click OK Always, Always, Usually or Only? The Always keep backups of all files. Keep a Backup, but let me choose the location of each backup. Every time I open, edit or create a file, add it to the most recent backup. Only save a file if I tell you to or when I want to. Always make a backup but don't show you my backups. I usually make a backup, but when I really need to save an important file, I'll 388ed7b0c7

Ask HN: Non-profits that help the needy in their community? - randomchars Which ones are you aware of? ===== lisper I think that the specific answer depends on the context. If you mean a random assortment of charities, I think that most large, well regarded non-profit orgs have already been given enough credit for helping out. Most people have heard of the US Red Cross and the US military, for example, but who has heard of the US Navy chaplain corps? If you don't know that then you know virtually nothing about charity. If you mean the kind of entity that could do a lot of good if they were able to engage in more active interaction with the poor communities they operate in, then I would have to defer to the people who know this area best, i.e. social workers and clinicians. ----- mrmch Some that come to mind are: American Cancer Society, Salvation Army, Direct Relief, and Doctors Without Borders. Depending on what you're looking for, there may be a lot more you can find on the web.

Duke student found guilty of threatening to kill classmates A Duke University sophomore accused of threatening to stab classmates as part of an antifeminist campaign was found guilty on Friday of two misdemeanor charges of making false statements to law enforcement. Christopher Waters, 19, was accused of two incidents at a Duke fraternity in 2013. In the first, he allegedly told a female fraternity member she could "end up dead" for her decision to end a romantic relationship with him, a Duke.edu profile of the case said. In the other, he allegedly told the same woman she could "end up dead" after returning his cellphone. Waters was charged after a 13-year-old girl had filed a police report alleging he had threatened to murder her and her family. After a mistrial last year, Waters was found guilty this week on two counts of making false statements to a law enforcement officer. Waters could have faced six months in jail and a $1,000 fine. His attorneys argued that the charges did not apply because the statements were not false. The finding Friday could be appealed, the Chronicle reported. Duke students expressed mixed feelings about Waters' sentence. "I was happy about the verdict, but I feel sad for the

An LA-based company called Second Dimensions is to blame. They're creating life-size, fully-featured mannequins, or "dolls" as they're called, that can be used in a variety of situations, reports The Verge. These dolls can perfectly replicate your appearance, right down to your clothes and personal preference. Aside from role-playing, their average price is $18,000, which is usually the price of a custom-made four-door luxury sedan. The dolls are so realistic, they can do things other sex dolls cannot, like laugh. To make this possible, they were built with tiny muscles that go to work when a button is pressed.
